In keeping with the contemporary design of their spacious home in Upper Saddle River, the homeowners envisioned a master bathroom that invoked the look of a modern spa. He wanted cool and simple. She wanted chic and hip. Enlisting the extensive experience of Alan Asarnow and Julia Kleyman, designers with Ridgewood-based Ulrich, a tailored yet soft interior design scheme was created to give the room a relaxing feel. A soothing palette of soft shades of browns and creams and the use of varied glass textures infuse the room with spa-like serenity. One design challenge tackled was the lack of privacy caused by the bathroom windows that faced the driveway. Frosted glass panels with an etched pattern were crafted, resulting in unique privacy screens. To accentuate the design of this personal spa oasis, Asarnow and Kleyman incorporated a top "must-have" on the homeowners' wish list: an oversized vanity and makeup area that houses multiple drawers, offering plenty of storage for personal items. For the "masters" of this bath, there is surely no other place where they would rather be than relaxing right here, at home. >
